Slide 3 — Case background — HUL's Fair & Lovely, launched 1975

Case background

- Fair and lovely was launched by HUL in 1975
- It has a presence in South-east Asian countries
- The cream's main active ingredient is niacinamide, a melanin suppressor
- It had a 90% share in Indian market at a point when its only competitor had just 10% share.
- When the competitor's market share began to increase, Fair and Lovely advertised the then controversial advertisements that made Fair and Lovely change their marketing strategy completely.

Responses to discussion questions

1. Is it ethical to sell a product that is, at best, only mildly effective?
2. Is it ethical to exploit cultural norms and values to promote a product?
3. Is the advertising of Fair & Lovely demeaning to women, or is it promoting the fairness cream in a way not too dissimilar from how most cosmetics are promoted?
4. Propose a promotion/marketing program that will counter all the arguments and charges against Fair & Lovely and be an effective program.
5. In light of AIDWA's charges, how would you suggest Fair & Lovely promote its product?
